LOGOTYPES

A combination of letters, numbers, designs on one piece of rubber is called a logotype. Logotypes can be as short as two characters— such as (≠5), (STYLE 482), abbreviations for flavor such as (Choc.-Van.), or as long as nine inches. Logotypes are made to a customer's specifications — so almost any combination or design is possible.

INK ROLLS

Extra ink rolls are available for color changes

AUTOMATIC INKING The self-inking feature on the CodeTaper No. 6 eliminates the nuisance of frequent re-inking. A highly absorbent special ink roll allows long runs of dark, clear impressions between inking. The ink is transferred to an intermediate smooth rubber roller which applies it to the type roll. This procedure results in less wear on the ink roll, more even ink coverage on the type roll and consistently sharper impressions on the tape.

CODETAPER INKS These are specially formulated for use with CodeTapers. Their instant drying, nontoxic qualities make them suitable for fast application, anywhere. Inks available in six colors.
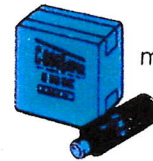

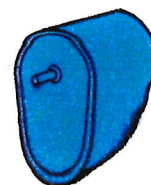

TYPE CHANGES ARE QUICK AND EASY The print roll, which can be easily lifted out for cleaning and type changes, contains a series of plastic rings which simplify type changes. To change the message, the operator loosens lock ring—allowing plastic rings to separate; he then inserts Baselock rubber type or logotypes between the loosened plastic rings and relocks.

Extra print rolls are available for frequently used imprints. Prints from interchangeable Baselock rubber type or precast mats. Better Packages can supply type—logotypes or special trademark imprint mats as required for your particular coding or imprinting needs.
